

The Nature of Lyme

When I first caught Lyme disease, I knew almost nothing about it. At first I thought it was like syphilis which causes arthritis. But this did not work. Lyme is its own unique and complex entity. So I had to find out about lyme from scratch.

I did this using methods which I had already developed to free myself of TB, EBV, strep and staph and other infections. I am a PhD research physicist and my methods are based upon combining advanced physics with methods of “energy medicine”, though I prefer to call it “quantum healing” or “quantum physic”., because orthodox medicines disease oriented, whereas healing is life-giving I explain my methods in more detail elsewhere on this website (see Water Essay; Truth; my background; etc).

Life is not a dead chemical, as scientists think. Life is a conscious, living field: spirit, the Unified Field; the life force. The real truth is the energy behind things. So for example every disease has its own life force. So when I caught lyme, I wanted to learn about its life force and what it does, since I wanted to get rid of it completely. I did this eventually, but it was 5 times more difficult than drug-resistant TB. In fact, God in His wisdom, gave me Lyme 5 times so I learn about all its aspects from experience.

What I say here is based upon direct experience, and my own method of testing, which helps me to get behind the surface, and find out about the core of the disease, which science often misses. I will present just a summary.

Nature of Lyme

Several years after I had first caught lyme, a local doctor (who also practised homeopathy) asked me what the symptoms of lyme disease are. I thought of all the hundreds of symptoms which people have identified, but this was too complex. So I summarized it as follows “Lyme disease creates a state like living death, where you are alive, but you can’t do anything. You may want to do things in the world, but somehow you can’t get them out there. You start to loose the ability to negotiate physical reality, which in some cases can lead to paranoia and poverty. Lyme takes over your being and allows you to continue to exist, provided you do not cause it any problems, such as actually curing it - see below.

Lyme disease is in a sense like two diseases. There is the normal disease in normal matter, and the etheric lyme in etheric matter. (There is increasing evidence that there are two different types of matter, normal matter and etheric (possibly dark) matter. Even though I am a research physicist, it took me a long time to get this.) When you take anti-biotics, they kill off the spirochaete in normal matter, and Lyme retreats into the etheric matter, where it waits until it is safe, and then it comes back into normal matter. One of my key breakthroughs was when I developed ways of boosting the immune system in etheric matter. Lyme really does not like that!

Lyme disease is very complex and apparently has the largest genome of any bacteria. Some people think it may be genetically modified. It may be, but it does not matter. What has been done, has been done. The disease exists and we have to deal with it. My approach is to use physics, because it is more powerful than chemistry. In fact I use living physics, which includes love and spirit.

So Lyme is this very complex disease, which moves between the etheric and normal matter.

Is it simple on spiritual levels? No way. It is an incredibly complex entity. When you finally start to get rid of it, you may experience, as I did, a terrible entity coming out of your abdomen. Another time I actually saw this hideous head with a single grey eye, leaving me.

My own feeling is that it has the DNA of other diseases added into it, and so it attracts the spirits of these diseases. However, they are relatively powerless, because they are in the wrong physical form (the spirochaete) to express their true nature. So you have this very strange, very complex, parasite, which tries to do all sorts of other things, bringing in untold negativity. What it does not like is the light. The problem is that you have to bring in an awful lot of light. At first that was my approach. But in time I found that it has weak points, places where it is vulnerable, and so can be attacked with more effectively by a simpler treatment. For example, it does not like love in certain places.

Most diseases have a spiritual logic, a reason why God has allowed them to exist. They point out weaknesses to us, so we can learn the lessons and address them. For example, TB is an imbalance between love and spirit (artists and spiritual people who meditate a lot, tend to go up about their heads, away from their hearts, and then TB attacks them at their throat and comes right in.) But TB hates love. Unify your spirit with your love, and it goes. Lyme tends to exploit all our negativities, and I think the lesson is that God wants us to clean these out, especially at this time. My method of treatment does just that.

Modern physics is multi-dimensional (string theory has 26 dimensions), and lyme is too. It goes way above the head. It attacks most of the energy centres coming into the body. But the two which it attacks the most are the third eye (6th chakra or church - in the Bible) in the forehead, and the second church (chakra) by the pubic bone. It is this centre where you are becoming physical which regulates what you create in the physical world - hence its ability to disrupt what you try to do in life. The Epstein Barr virus (EBV) also comes in through the 6th centre, and so often lyme enables EBV to play up. Both attack the pituitary gland in the centre of the brain, which is the master controller of the immune system - but in different ways. So usually you have to boost your immune system against EBV and Lyme at the same time.

A number of infections affect the second centre (herpes 2; syphilis and gonorrhoea, also the drug-resistant form of it which I call diplococci because it is crossed with strep). Lyme affects the digestive tract (as you probably know) and completely disrupts the immune system in the abdomen. By breaking down the immune system in the brain and the abdomen, it destroys the immune system in completely different parts of the body. But the two are linked by the spinal cord. Lyme gets from the second centre, into the spinal cord, and goes up into the meninges of the brain, where it can cause meningitis-like symptoms and otherwise further disrupt the brain and nervous system.

Lyme gets into the nervous system. This is bad news because the brain uses the nervous system to regulate the immune system throughout the body. Lyme stops the brain doing this, although in a sense it does not have to, because it switches the brain into a negative mode, where, instead of building the body, it starts to disassemble it, if this makes sense. Lyme also gets into the optic nerve, where it imprints the image (energy) of lyme, so that you see lyme, and what you see is what you create. You are beginning to get the picture. It destroys your ability to create yourself. In fact you can't get rid of lyme until you have got it out of the brain and nervous system, and switched your brain back into the positive constructive mode.

Lyme is not an aggressive masculine disease, but a subtle female one. It comes in through your right brain, thereby blocking your intuition, and it takes over your left leg (your feminine side, even if you are a man). In fact it likes to hide in the knuckle in the arch of the left foot, and you will not be free of lyme until you have got it out of there. There is an energy centre there which brings in compassion. So lyme attacks your compassion.

It is also a disease of the gaps. It likes to hide in your joints, in your synapses (joins between nerves) and in other spaces in your body, such as in your intestinal tract, which in a sense is outside your body since food passes through it. This subtle, complex, highly intelligent, etherial disease so that it hardly exists, can be beaten. But you have to wise up. You have to realise that this will be one of the major battles of your life. Of course it may not be as bad for you as other people. But it helps to be prepared for the worst, so you have the determination to see this through. And if it is easier than you expect, great.

The first problem is that it controls your brain. Like a lot of diseases, it hides in negative thoughts, which it can also control. So if you think about freeing yourself from lyme, it will find negative thoughts which will stop you. A classic is "It is incurable". You see it destroys your will, and puts you into a self-destructive state. Another is "The treatment is too expensive, and I don't have enough money." And so on and so on. It has taken over. It is more than just a parasite. It is a monster which allows you to survive, because it suits it. You have to get smart, and overcome these negative thoughts.

In fact it is worse than this, because it can also influence your emotions too. It will add negative emotions into your negative thoughts, thereby re-enforcing them. In order to beat lyme, you have to have inner resolve, which is not just in your brain or will or emotions. You need to go into your heart or into your spirit, and resolve that you WILL overcome ALL obstacles and get rid of it. Of course the first obstacles are the negative thoughts and emotions which are convincing you that it is impossible to succeed. It's not impossible, but it may be difficult.

Collapse of the Immune System

The problem with lyme disease is that it is more fiendish than described above. It is a bit like an onion, or those Russian dolls with different layers. Science looks at the outer layers. If you have lyme, then you get symptoms from the outer layers of the disease, some of which may come from all those odd bits of DNA in it. It is my impression that these try to produce their respective diseases, but cannot because they are in the wrong physical form. So many of the symptoms of lyme are meta-diseases, a kind of superficial froth, which make it more complex than it is. My approach has been to penetrate down through the layers of this superficial complexity, to the inner core of it.

One of the things I found is that lyme is like the overlap of lyme itself, syphilis and TB. Whether it has syphilis or TB genes in it, I don't know, but it behaves a bit like that. Boosting the immune system against syphilis and TB, often helps one to fight the Lyme. However, lyme is not the same as these, fortunately, because it does not (normally) attack the immune system much at the thymus gland - unlike TB. But lyme does cause the immune system to collapse more or less everywhere else. I found out about this, when God showed me in His own unique way.

I was at a friend's house on the edge of the local Forest of Woolmer, when I found a tic on her cat. So she got out her special tic teasers and removed it and put it on the kitchen table. The tic started to walk! I thought this was not a good idea and squashed it with the back of my thumb nail. She ticked me off (sic), and then cleaned up the mess and disinfected everything. I went home and started working on my computer. Half an hour later, I started to feel queasy. To find out what was going on, I started to test myself. I tested positive for Borrelia burgdorferi, when previously I had been negative. It seems there were spirochaetes on the outside of my thumb nail, and I swear they were trying to bore through it! I left them there whilst I went on testing myself.

My experience with TB and other infections was that if you can find out what they do when you are first infected and can reverse that, then it makes it much easier to get rid of the infection. So I started testing myself to see what it was doing. It turned out it was causing my immune system to collapse in at least four different ways. The immune system works best if it acts as a single unified whole. God is the unified Source of creation, and He provides that inner unity of your immune system - if you are healthy (and allow Him). Lyme breaks your connection with God and the Unity of Nature, and so starts the process of your immune system collapsing and fragmenting. We all have different inner weaknesses, and we tend to fragment along our own lines of weakness. This is one reason why lyme varies so much between people.

Destroying your Unity, is not enough for lyme. It has to cause your immune system to collapse in other ways. For example, it uses mercury (which I think it makes - see below) to switch off your immune system in your corpus callosum in the centre of your brain. The corpus callosum is a bundle of nerves between the left and right brain. Lyme puts mercury into the centre of this nerve bundle, forcing your spirit out of your brain, disrupting communication between the left and right sides of your brain, and causing your immune system to collapse. Basically this stops your immune system from detecting, identifying, and destroying alien pathogens.

But it is worse than this. There is a direct link between your immune system in the centre of your brain, and your pancreas. When the immune system collapses in this way, the regulation of the pancreas is disrupted, so that your immune system in your abdomen does not work properly, your digestive tract goes haywire, and your sugar metabolism starts to break down. Really. These things may not occur all at once, nor set in completely, but the tendency, has been enabled.

You begin to see the picture. If you are to beat lyme by boosting the immune system, the first thing you have to do is to unify your immune system and turn it back on, so that you have an immune system to boost! You may wonder how I could learn all of this, whilst I had lyme spirochaetes on my thumb nail. Well please understand this incident occurred after I had had lyme about 4 times and developed a complex second generation treatment over 4 or 5 years, so I already knew a lot about lyme, and suspected it did such things. The spirochaetes on my thumb nail just enabled me to confirm what happened in the first hour of infection. I then plunged my thumb nail into hot bleach and killed them - most satisfying!

Gold

Gold is a trace element. In fact it is recognised as a food additive (eg to decorate cakes) by US and EU law. Particles of gold are important for building your heart, brain, nervous and immune systems. Gold is one of the most powerful healing substances known to man. There is evidence that lyme steals your gold and uses it for its own purposes. One of the things it seems to do is convert it (there is scientific evidence for alchemy) into mercury and lead. It then uses the mercury to poison your joints and lead to poison your nerves. The mercury helps to block your life force and immune system in your joints. The lead helps to do the same in your nerves. Plus as I later found, it puts mercury into the corpus callosum and causes the immune system to collapse. So Lyme weakens people in several ways. Not only is their gold taken from the core of their beings, but it then is used against them in these various ways.

The solution is not just to give them gold, although they are almost certainly deficient in it, because if you just did that it would feed the Lyme, and probably make it worse. Instead it is necessary to remove the mercury from the corpus callosum, turn the immune system back on stimulate the detoxing of mercury and other heavy metals, and stimulate the absorption of gold, so that when you take colloidal gold, you will use it for yourself, and it is not used by the Lyme. Some of my remedies stimulate the absorption of gold. For example, remedies with love in them.

Please note there is an antagonistic relationship between selenium and gold. If your gold level is low, then your selenium level may be high, and this seems to occur in Lyme. The way to correct for this is NOT to supply selenium, but to supply gold as above. Please be very very very suspicious of any Lyme treatment which encourages you to take selenium. It is almost certainly misguided. (Platinum is another important trace mineral - see my article on nutrition.)

Lyme Immune Deficiency Syndrome (LIDS)

Lyme frequently comes with co-infections such as babesia, bartonella, mycoplasma and Ehrlichiosis. (Some people think these are more difficult to get rid of than the Lyme. I have treatments for these and in my experience they are easier to remove than the Lyme.) People also often have Epstein Barr virus (EBV), which is aggravated by the Lyme. Then they often take antibiotics for the Lyme and start to develop problems from candida. So people with Lyme frequently have 4 to 6 infections. However, it may not stop there.

As we have seen above, Lyme disease causes the immune system to collapse, and so you become susceptible to other infections. Frequently people get other infections and cannot fight them off, so they become chronic. Common ones are strep, staph, swine flu (H1N1) cytomegalo virus (CMV) and so on. More serious ones are the Mood Virus, Coxsackie type A and B viruses and TB, all of which attack the thymus gland, which Lyme does not attack so much, and so they make the collapse of the immune system much worse. This more complete collapse of the immune system creates a condition I call Lyme Immune Deficiency Syndrome (LIDS), which is in some ways similar to AIDS, hence the name.

I don't have a precise definition of LIDS (maybe if someone would buy me a microbiology laboratory I could do this), but if someone has the mood virus or Coxsackie A and B viruses and/or TB, or if they have more than 10 infections, then their illness starts to be more serious and can be classified as LIDS. If you have LIDS, then the treatment is more difficult and it is going to take longer, but it is still possible.

Conclusions

Lyme is scary because, unless you zap it within a few weeks with the right antibiotic treatment, it can become chronic. It is also confusing because it produces so many different symptoms. It is said to be the new great imitator, like syphilis used to be. If you go back say 500 years to the early days of syphilis, people were dropping dead like flies. Since then our immune systems have evolved and syphilis is no longer quite so serious. (In fact I know of one case of a nurse who did not know she had it, because it did not produce any symptoms.) The solution to Lyme is to help your immune system to evolve rapidly, which my remedies and treatments do, because they are spiritual - they contain life itself.

This complexity of Lyme, with all its different symptoms, confuses people. My research shows that beneath the surface, the disease is simpler. It is still pretty fiendish, getting into the brain, nervous system, digestive tract and joints, often causing major problems in some or all of these areas. However, by reversing the collapse of the immune system, rebuilding and boosting the immune system, and putting right much of what it has caused to go wrong, it is possible to over come Lyme and its co-infections.

I have treated a local doctor for Lyme (from a tic bite) a few co-infections and TB, and all these infections have gone. I am currently treating a farmer's wife who had 12 infections last year (Lyme TB, etc). As of last March, 8 of these had gone and the remaining 4 were Lyme, TB, staph and ? Furthermore, her health has improved a lot. She runs the farm office (they grow vegetables) and she does the payroll for 250 people! The treatment is ongoing and she is determined to get rid of all the infections. So it is possible.
